

Indigenous & Black Experiences in Georgia: A Speaker Series

Dr. James Owen

*Assistant Director, Institute of Native America Studies
University of Georgia*

Acknowledging Native American Relationships to the Land

Dr. Owen will discuss the purpose of a land acknowledgement and why these statements are important, especially at an institution like UNG, which played a particular role in the dispossession of Cherokee Nation in the early 19th century. Land acknowledgements are not about placing blame on Euro-American societies, but about acknowledging Native roles that have been historically overwritten.

Thurs. April 6, 3 - 4 PM
Dahlonega Library, Room 382

Livestream Viewings:

Blue Ridge: Room 121
Cumming: Room 160

Gainesville: Performing Arts Rm 108
Oconee: Room 581

Online: <https://cglink.me/2du/r1931068>

A year-long series in honor of the Sesquicentennial focusing on Black and Indigenous experiences in the Southeast